“Teaching music is one of the most important and stimulating of professions. As teachers we can inspire, encourage and help our pupils to develop the ability to play or sing music independently and so give them a skill that can really enhance their lives” - Paul Harris

After studies in clarinet at the Royal Academy of Music and in music education with Professor Keith Swanwick at the University of London, Paul has now established an international reputation as one of the UK's leading educationalists. He now has nearly six hundred publications to his name, mostly dealing with a vast array of music education. His Music Teacher's Companion won the UK's MIA Best New Book award. In addition he has written many works ranging from short education pieces to seven concertos, a ballet and a children's opera.

Paul is an examiner and adjudicator and is frequently asked to take part in national events including the Chamber Music for Schools Competition, Music for Youth, the BBC Young Musician of the Year and he is a regular judge for Classic FMs teacher of the year. Paul has also co-authored major new biographies of Sir Malcolm Arnold, Malcolm Williamson and Sir Richard Rodney Bennett and has been appointed Lecturer in the Principles of Education at the RAM, London.

Paul's innovative teaching techniques have found support all over the world and combine thoroughness, imagination and practicality.
